OF OUR WALTER JOHNSON.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Dallas, Texas, March 27.—John McGraw, manager of the Giants, saw Walter Johnson work three innings, and admitted Johnson work three innings, and admitted Johnson was all reports had said. He commented especially upon the control Johnson has in using curves and his ability to place the fast straight ball where he pleased. Strangely enough, McGraw does not like Johnson's side arm motion, claiming it tends to wear out, a pitcher. This theory in regard to Johnson is at variance with that of all the other critics, who believe Johnson will last as long as Cy Young.

CY YOUNG TO OPEN SEASON.

The information has just drifted up from Louisiana, the Southern training camp of the Cleveland Naps, that Lajole is preparing to play his trump card in the opening game of the season, April 14, with St. Louis, by playing old Cy Young in the box. Although the season is still too young to pick a sure boxman for the initial game, it is pretty certein that Cy will work.

The veteran pitcher has performed that trick for several years, and Addie Joss will no doubt be held in reserve. Old Cy displayed wonderful condition in his game with Mobile last Thursday, and although he only curved the ball a little, he possessed an abundance of control. For five innings only one man reached first. He seemed to have things his own way, and did not try for a strike-out record, contenting himself with putting over straight ones to give the infielders practice.

After pitching the five innings, Cy put on a heavy sweater and circled the field five times, the last time at a sprint. His wind is in excellent condition. His greatest success is in training and he knows how to go about it.
